Every day, there are news reports about natural disasters, like floods, earthquakes, and hurricanes in the media. With weather conditions occurring more and more often, you may want to be ready for them. There are three important things you should do at home to prepare.

In general, the first thing is to stock up on emergency supplies. You should keep enough food and water for at least three days in your house. Choose food that can be stored for a long time and food that can be eaten cooking. Canned foods, such as soup, fish, meat, and fruit are good choices. You can also store foods like crackers and nuts. On top of that, be sure to store food that you like, and include a few special treats^(注1) like candy or cookies. In an emergency situation, it's nice to have something to you up. As well as that, it is important to include any special foods that babies, small children, or elderly people in your family may need. Another thing is water: be sure to keep plenty of it. Each person needs about four liters of water per day for drinking and basic washing.

Generally speaking, emergencies can occur in every country in the world, but it's important to think about you might need for the kinds of disasters that are more likely in your country. You might need blankets, very warm clothes, flashlights, or plastic bags. In other words, think about possible situations, and buy the things that would be needed to ⁽¹⁾cope with them.

In addition, plan what you will do in case you need to evacuate^(注2) your home. In particular, decide where you will go and actually arrange a meeting place in advance, such as a relative's home or a big public building. Also, be sure that all family members have the phone number of a contact person in another city. In short, have a plan to (ア) if you become separated.

To sum up: people don't like to think about natural disasters, but a little bit of preparation can save lives. Following these steps will help you be ready for any kind of emergency.
